Chasers Hahn and Hensen Seize Yacht Onward From Nassau.

6,000 CASES ON BOARD

Whisky Vessel's Skipper Says She Was Once Owned by Henry Ford.

OTHER CRAFT ESCAPE

Iowa and Mathilda, Outside of Customs Limit, Refuse to Be Boarded.

The "dry navy" established contact early Thursday morning with three alleged rum running vessels fourteen miles due east of Fire Island. One vessel, said by its skipper to be the yacht Onward, formerly the property of Henry Ford, was boarded by Capt. George Tawes of the booze chaser Hahn and found weighted down with more than 2,000 cases of liquors on her decks and as much below. The two other craft, identified as the schooners Iowa and Mathilda, also were whisky laden, according to the authorities, but boarding was refused because they were beyond the customs limit.

Details of the boarding of the Onward, which, like the Iowa and the Mathilda, flew the British colors, were obtained yesterday when Capt. Tawes returned to port and reported to John D. Appleby, prohibition zone officer and admiral of the "dry navy." Capt. Tawes said the three vessels lay at anchor with lights out when he came upon them and the Iowa and Mathilda quickly weighed anchor and put out to sea. The skipper of the Onward, who was friendly enough and readily permitted the authorities to board his vessel, was sole authority for the statement that the craft was at one time owned by Mr. Ford. Available yachting directories and officers of the New York Yacht Club who could be reached failed to bear him out.

Capt. Tawes roughly estimated the value of the Onward's cargo at $1,000,000. The bootleg value probably would be from four to five times that. Capt. Tawes inquired for the Onward's manifest and found it had none, nor a bill of lading. Her skipper said the booze was from the Island of Nassau, whence also came the Iowa's cargo, and it was bound for that little island off the coast of Nova Scotia known as St. Pierre de Miquelon, which is said to have a population of about one hundred persons and to be saloonless.

With the Hahn, when she sighted the three liquor vessels, was the rum chaser Hensen, which put to sea Wednesday night when word was flashed ashore that four alleged bootleg vessels were twenty miles off Fire Island. After contact had been established the chasers Taylor and Larsen left to take the vessels and to return to the Hahn, which had been at sea since the bootleg blockade of the coast from Philadelphia to Boston was established nearly a week ago. Another reason for the desire of Capt. Tawes to get back to port was the fact that he had aboard his craft John D. Appleby, Jr., the eleven-year-old son of the "dry navy's" admiral.

CUTTER SEIZES YACHT WITH $15,000 IN RUM

Two Dive Off Craft and Escape Dry Agent.

COPENHAGEN, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The United States revenue cutter Chillicothe entered port here today with a yacht, formerly the Jewel III, in tow. It had been seized in Alexandria Bay early in the morning. United States revenue officers and prohibition officers there found a cargo of 175 cases of Scotch liquor aboard. The liquor is valued at $15,000.

Three men were aboard the yacht when it was captured, but two escaped by diving overboard. A third man, who said he was Jake Gorman of Syracuse, was taken into custody.

The seizure is the most important made in northern New York since the Volstead act went into effect, prohibition officials said.

HELD FOR DELAYED FUNERAL

Undertaker Accused of Insisting on $250 Fee in Advance.

William R. Rabian, an undertaker, of 231 West 136th street, was held in $1,500 bail for special session by Magistrate Smith in Washington Heights court yesterday on a charge of interfering with a funeral.

Mrs. M. G. Stevenson, a negro, of 2321 Seventh avenue, testified she employed Rabian to bury her daughter, Anna, 17. Friends gathered, she stated, but the undertaker did not appear. She said on the telephone, it was told her, he said he could not proceed until he had been paid his charges of $250. The service was delayed until the money was paid.

MAN ENDS LIFE IN BATHTUB

Dependent because of long illness Martin Bechtold 72, committed suicide yesterday at his home, 167 Frelinghuysen avenue, Newark, according to the police, by drowning himself in the bathtub. Bechtold accompanied his wife, who was going shopping, to the corner and, returning home, met Harry Bass, a neighbor, and remarked he was tired of life. Bass fifteen minutes later went to Bechtold's home and found him dead.

WOMAN ASSERTS LEADERS OF SEX OPPOSE PROHIBITION

Alice Carpenter, Answering Critic, Lists Eminent Advocates of Amendment to Allow Use of Light Wines and Beer.

Public sentiment is turning rapidly in favor of light wines and beer in the opinion of Miss Alice Carpenter, director of the women's committee of the Association Against Prohibition. She issued a statement yesterday in answer to criticism by Miss Mary Garrett Hay of the League of Women Voters.

Miss Hay protested against activities of women who favor relaxing the prohibition laws and said that, with most of the members of the women's committee in Europe, she wondered who was doing its work. Miss Carpenter said: "I am happy to inform Miss Hay that the work of the women's committee is being carried on with the help of such able women as Mrs. Theodore L. Van Norden, Mrs. John H. Iselin, Mrs. George T. Maxwell, Mrs. Edward S. Harkness, Mrs. Charles E. Proctor, Mrs. William Hofstra and others in or near the city.

Since Miss Hay has not sympathy with our movement, I know she will be sorry to hear we have not only what she calls "society women," for whom from her statements I should assume she has an antipathy, but women like Mrs.

SEIZED AS KIDNAPER KILLED NEAR SPOT IN $40,000 MYSTERY HUSBAND MET DEATH

Longshoreman Accused of Taking Merchant's Wife and Son on June 23.

Detective Flischetti and others of the Italian Squad arrested Vincenzo Damini, 36, a longshoreman of 148 Tenth avenue, yesterday on a charge of kidnapping and extortion made by Salvatore Avareno, a merchant of 54 Oak street, who says he lost his wife, his small son and $40,000 last June 23. Damini was locked up at Police Headquarters.

Avareno said that one or more men somehow had induced his wife to withdraw all the money and jewels they had in the bank and leave him. At one time, he told detectives, he was inclined to suspect a well dressed young man who owned an automobile and who had been seen with his wife several times. One theory was that she ran away with this man; another was that she was carried away by force by a gang of kidnapers. Detectives said last night that they thought Damini had a part in the abduction scheme.

Soon after the disappearance of his wife Avareno began to receive threatening letters, one of which demanded $400 ransom for his son Anthony, 3.

A man whom he now says was Damini called one night and led him to the Grand Central Terminal, where he met three other men. He said he gave them $200, all he had with him, and got the boy back. Later he was warned to pay the other $200, but he has not done so.

A week or so after the disappearance of his wife, said Avareno, he got a letter from his wife in which she asked him and her mother to forgive her for leaving and taking the money. She said she would return as soon as "the gang" would turn her loose. The letter was postmarked Madison, Ill. Detectives believe, however, that Mrs. Avareno is being held in this city and that the letter was sent to Madison to be mailed. They said they had learned that Damini, the prisoner, has a sister living in Madison.

HYLAN COMMISERATES WITH BUSLESS BUFFALO

Tells Schwab All the State's Mayors Must Unite.

When Mayor Hylan learned yesterday that the up-State Public Service Commission had refused to Mayor Frank N. Schwab of Buffalo permission to operate buses there he sent a message of sympathy as on the previous night he had sent one of congratulation as an advocate of buses. The later Hylan message said:

"We have met with such denials by the State Transit Commission here, but in spite of this fact, in spite of obstructive and adverse tactics of the traction companies and their allies and in spite of court decisions we are able to operate some bus lines in this city.

"Keep up your efforts to establish a universal bus system, because as sure as night follows day motor buses must supplant surface trolley cars in all large cities. It is absolutely necessary that we endeavor to effect legislation enabling the cities to purchase buses and establish their own bus lines."

Mayor Schwab telegraphed his thanks for the messages.

FOUL PLAY IS SCOUTED IN TROWBRIDGE CASE

Maid Saw Mistress Loading Gun Before Death.

Rumors that foul play might have been responsible for the death of Mrs. Mabel Nelson Trowbridge in her home, 401 St. Anna, Miller's Place, near Port Jefferson, L. I. Sunday afternoon were not given credence yesterday by the authorities of Suffolk county. All agreed last night that Mrs. Trowbridge, who was the wife of Francis B. Trowbridge of New Haven, had killed herself in a fit of momentary insanity, as reported by the coroner.

Jacob S. Dreyer of Port Jefferson, a former justice of the peace, called LeRoy M. Young, District Attorney of Suffolk county, on the telephone yesterday and asked for permission to make a further investigation into the death of Mrs. Trowbridge. Mr. Young consented, and, after questioning one of the maids in the Trowbridge home, he now reported that Mrs. Trowbridge had ended her life when insane. The maid told him that she followed Mrs. Trowbridge into her bedroom Sunday afternoon and saw her loading a revolver. Her mistress commanded her to leave the room, she said, and she did so.

A few minutes later a shot was heard, and Mrs. Trowbridge was found dead with a revolver lying beside her body. It is believed that ill health was responsible for her suicide.

Mrs. Trowbridge was 47 years old. She and the two colored servants were the only occupants of the country house. Mrs. Trowbridge makes her home in New Haven. Thomas Hooker, Jr., his attorney, said yesterday that Mr. Trowbridge did not care to discuss the matter.

PROMINENT MEN DEPUTIES.

Ship Builder, Banker and Undertaker Aids to Marshal.

Three Special Deputy United States Marshals were sworn in yesterday by Federal Judge Chatfield in Brooklyn. They are William H. Todd, president of the Todd Shipbuilding Corporation; William H. English, vice-president of the Empire Trust Company and president of the Montauk Club; and Michael A. Orlando, undertaker.

Judge Chatfield praised their records in public work and spoke of the possibility of trouble. He called attention to the statement of Ralph Peters, president of the Long Island Railroad, that he would "stand by all employees who had stood by him."

CLARKE WILL CONTEST OFF.

Widow Withdraws Objection to Legacy to Miss Hallett.

The will of Richard Floyd Clarke, international lawyer and author, which his widow, Mrs. Pellicie Fox Clarke of 352 West Fifty-fifth street, undertook to contest last November, has been admitted to probate by Surrogate Polster, it was learned yesterday. Mrs. Clarke having withdrawn her objections.

As a result Henry S. Fleming of 41 West Forty-seventh street, the executor, is relieved of explicit instructions to fight strenuously to maintain its provisions, which left the bulk of the estate to Miss A. Coralie Hallett of 115 West Eighty-eighth street, without mentioning Mrs. Clarke. Miss Hallett had known the Clarke more than thirty years.

Papers filed in the withdrawal of the contest did not indicate the basis of settlement.

UMPIRE MORAN A VICTIM

National League Arbitrator One of Two New Cases of Illness Reported.

Neither the police, the District Attorney nor the private detectives retained by the Rossier Restaurant Company, Inc. made appreciable progress yesterday in their efforts to find the person who killed seven patrons of the Shelburn Restaurant, 1127 Broadway, by putting arsenic into the pastry last Monday.

District Attorney Banton said he had found neither motive nor clew, but believed this the sort of mystery that would dissolve almost instantly the moment the police and his own detectives came on certain missing facts that are needed to complete what they believe to be the "logical answer."

All those actively participating in the hunt for the animals—and there seems to be no remaining doubt but that it was the act of a cunning criminal—concede that they have a few facts that indicate certain suspects. They say, in addition, that these suspects are under more or less constant observation but that thus far they have no facts that would warrant arrests.

Zigzag Driver Pleads He Took Only Cold Cure

POLICEMAN IRVING DAVIES of the West 124th street station has an untrained sense of smugness and that always is a big handicap in enforcing the law, in the opinion of George Forsyth, 32, a former soldier, of 178 West Ninety-fourth street.

"What the cop thought smelled like whisky wasn't whisky at all, but listerine I am taking for a cold," Forsyth told Magistrate Cobb in Traffic Court when arraigned yesterday on a charge of driving an automobile when intoxicated.

The policeman insisted that even if he couldn't smell so very well he had good eyesight and could tell when an automobile was zigzagging down a street. That, he insisted, was what Forsyth's car was doing. The Magistrate dismissed the intoxicated charge, but sentenced Forsyth to five days in prison for reckless driving and suspended his license for thirty days.
